Issue 13, April 2025

Introduction

Welcome back, we hope you managed to have a lovely break.

It has been two years now since the establishment of Westmorland and Furness Council, how quickly the time has flown! I just wanted to share thanks to all school staff who have carried on with the important day job of teaching our children and young people and a thank you to everyone involved in delivering governance, which contributes to ensuring the best outcomes for all our children and young people.

Renewal of NGA Learning Link eLearning (NGA LL)

Westmorland and Furness Council are pleased to announce that they will continue to fund free access to the NGA LL eLearning platform for the 2025 – 2026 financial year.

Please do take advantage of this fantastic resource to help build and enhance your boards existing skills and knowledge. You will need to register to access the platform, if you have not yet registered, instructions of how to do this and a guide to the platform can be found here.

Sometimes, the biggest challenge can be where to start! NGA LL have provided a suggested pathway covering a governance year, that may help with your development journey. They have separate pathways for the following roles:

- Maintained school governors
- Multi Academy Trust Trustees
- Local academy committee/Local governing board members

If governors would like to refer back to any information in previous newsletters, please visit the Governor Support Team (GST) website.

Information

As well as the Department for Education (DfE) School Governance update, below are further items which may be of interest:

Health & Safety: The importance of recording incidents at work

1. It's important to record incidents, such as accidents or near misses at work to improve safety in the workplace. When an accident occurs, it's crucial to understand how and why it happened. Analysing these incidents means we can take proactive steps to make sure it doesn't happen again – not only keeping employees, pupils and visitors safe, but ensuring that the business of education can continue running smoothly.

2. Effective health and safety investigations will assist in identifying any deficiencies in risk control measures and the actions required to prevent future injuries, harm or losses. They will also help to inform any potential future claim investigations that might arise following an incident.
3. It's a legal responsibility. This goes without saying – but your legal responsibility is one of the most important reasons to record accidents at work.

Certain accidents also need to be reported to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) under Reporting of injuries, diseases and dangerous occurrences regulations (RIDDOR). These incidents must be submitted within a short timeframe, it's therefore important to record any kind of accidents immediately

You should ensure that you regularly monitor accidents and incidents and produce an annual health and safety report. Community and voluntary controlled schools should ensure that all incidents involving adults and all significant incidents to pupils (i.e. those requiring or being advised to seek further medical treatment above minor first aid) are being reported to the Council's Health and Safety Team.

The team will continue to review submitted accidents and report RIDDOR reportable incidents to the HSE on a school's behalf and will produce data reports for the Council's Schools Health and Safety Committee. If you require information in relation to accident/incident data for your school, please contact the Health and Safety mailbox to request this, HealthAndSafety.Mailbox.WAF@cumbria.gov.uk.

Managing asbestos in your school or college

The 'Regional improvement for standards and excellence' has been updated with information about how RISE will operate and be funded, which schools are eligible for targeted intervention, and the universal service's national priorities.

New cyber security service for schools launched

A free cyber security service aimed at protecting schools from online threats, including malware, ransomware, and phishing attacks has been launched by the National Cyber Security Centre (NCSC).

For those interested and eligible, you can register by requesting your Domain Name System (DNS) provider to sign up through MyNCSC. Schools uncertain about their provider should consult their IT or internet manager.

Unlocking the superpowers of school food

The National Governance Association (NGA) joined fellow members of the School Food Review coalition at a parliamentary event to launch the updated Superpowers of School Food evidence pack. The report highlights current evidence that free school meals (FSM) improve children's health, academic performance, and well-being while also delivering long-term economic benefits.

Governing boards can find out more about their vital role in ensuring children have access to quality, healthy food as part of a whole school approach by completing the NGA LL e-Learning module, A whole school approach to food, produced in partnership with the DfE.

Research highlights disparity in free school meal eligibility

New research has found significant differences between the number of children estimated to be living in poverty and those who are receiving FSM or pupil premium.

The findings published by the Education Policy Institute identify key reasons for the disparity, including the low-income threshold (£7,400 per year), under-registration, and eligibility rules that ignore factors like housing costs and family size.

In response, the report recommends expanding the coverage of FSM eligibility and introducing autoenrollment for eligible children.

ParentKind has also produced a new report, The Missing Chapter, which urges the government to include reducing school costs in its upcoming Child Poverty Strategy.

Recognising that educational disadvantage affects many more children than those who meet the FSM eligibility criteria, underpins NGA's Disadvantage: Widening the Lens guidance and toolkits.

Gender gap in maths and science performance

According to the latest report on England's performance in the Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study, boys performance in maths and science has risen significantly to that of girls. The report also found that pupils eligible for FSMs had a lower average score than those not eligible.

In maths at year 9, boys' average score rose (516 to 538), while the score for girls dropped (514 to 512) – this is the first time (since 2003) that a statistically significant gap has been seen at year 9 and was the largest for any of the countries participating in 2023.

It is important that boards understand and can interpret data received to identify trends. There are a few modules on NGA LL in relation to data that may help with understanding and interpreting the data received, such as:

- Monitoring performance data and targets
- Progress and attainment: using data to improve educational outcomes
- Pupil Premium.

Pupil premium

Information on pupil premium funding, how school leaders can use it effectively, including support for pupil premium strategy statements. DfE has updated 'Using pupil premium: guidance for school leaders'.

In addition, another research report has been produced, The impact of school absence on lifetime earnings that estimates the monetary impact of one day of school absence in state-funded secondary schools.

- Ensuring high standards for all
- Addressing subject specific challenges
- Responding to social and technological change
- Ensuring pathways beyond GCSE and work for all.

Young people to benefit from creative education boost

DfE have announced a new package to support young people to access high-quality arts education and enrichment activities as well as AI and tech opportunities.

See NGA's cultural education guidance to explore the benefits of arts and creativity and learn how you can influence its provision in your school or trust. Some suggested considerations/questions for boards:

- Does the school offer a broad and balanced curriculum that develops creativity through cultural education?
- Is the school meeting its statutory curriculum requirements?
- Does the board receive information about the range and impact of cultural activities on pupils' learning, for example as part of the headteacher's report?
- What data is there in the school about pupil engagement with cultural education? What does it indicate about which pupils are the most involved? What are the trends over time in this? If certain groups of pupils aren't engaging with cultural education, do we know why? What are we doing to improve this?
- Does the school work with other schools to share best practice and pool resources?
- How does the school involve parents in their children's cultural education?

This sits alongside a £1 billion investment from the DfE to fund the 44,500 additional places in mainstream schools for children with SEND by 2028. Improving staff wellbeing

Governing boards play a vital role in fostering the wellbeing of all staff within their school or trust, including ensuring a healthy work-life balance.

Creating a positive and supportive working environment not only helps attract and retain staff but also has the potential to improve pupil outcomes.

To achieve this, boards should utilise data, such as absence records, alongside feedback from surveys and other channels, to identify factors affecting staff wellbeing.

New research from the National Association of Headteachers (NAHT) has revealed that more than four in five school leaders (82%) have been subject to abuse from parents in the past year, including threats, online abuse, discrimination and violence.

NAHT have called on the government to send a clear signal to parents that this abuse is unacceptable in schools, and to conduct a review of the current complaints procedures.

Governing boards play an important role in supporting school leaders, see NGA LL eLearning module, Management of workload and wellbeing: the governance role. Other organisations that support wellbeing:
